Non-Foam Polyurethane is a type of polyurethane material, but unlike common foam-based polyurethane (Polyurethane Foam), it usually refers to a polyurethane material that does not have a significant bubble structure or foam structure. This material typically has higher density and strength and is suitable for applications requiring higher mechanical properties or specific physical properties. Non-foam-based polyurethane can be obtained through different preparation processes and formulations to meet different application needs. For example, it can be processed into products of various shapes and sizes through injection molding, casting, extrusion and other processes. In short, non-foam-based polyurethane is a high-performance material with broad application prospects. Its unique physical properties and chemical stability enable it to play an important role in various fields.

The global Non-foam Based Polyurethane market size is projected to grow from US$ million in 2024 to US$ million in 2030; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of % from 2024 to 2030.
