Abrasive products used for finishing of metal and non-metallic workpieces in the production plant are generally categorized into two main groups: bonded abrasives (usually grinding wheels) and coated abrasives (belts, discs, sheets, etc.). These are the products used to remove stock during the production process. But there is a third category of abrasives that serve a specialized and highly necessary function of preparing and applying the final surface finish, which can be critical to the performance and appearance of the workpiece. These are the non-woven abrasives. These products are manufactured using a “web” of nylon fibers that are bonded together (not woven together – hence the name) with synthetic resins. The fibers are impregnated with abrasive grain, producing a cushioned, three-dimensional material that is pliable, conformable to the workpiece, and long-lasting. Non-woven abrasives can be the ideal grinding products for deburring, cleaning, and imparting the desired finish to a wide variety of materials. A basic understanding of how these products are made, and how they should be selected and used to their maximum benefit, can help the metalworking manufacturer achieve the desired surface finish.

According to this study, over the next five years the Nonwoven Abrasives market will register a xx% CAGR in terms of revenue, the global market size will reach US$ xx million by 2024, from US$ xx million in 2019.
