The global Outsourced Order Processing Services market size is predicted to grow from US$ 36515 million in 2025 to US$ 57174 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 6.7% from 2026 to 2032.

Outsourced order processing services refer to an operational model where companies entrust the management of non-core business processes after receiving sales orders to third-party professional companies. Service providers, relying on their information systems, standardized processes, and professional teams, efficiently execute operations across the entire chain or specific stages on behalf of client companies, from order receipt, data entry, inventory verification, payment processing, logistics coordination to after-sales tracking. Its core value lies in helping companies reduce operating costs, improve the accuracy and timeliness of order processing, cope with sales peak fluctuations, and enable companies to focus more on core businesses such as product development and marketing, thereby achieving lightweight and professional back-end supply chain operations.

The industry outlook remains positive, directly benefiting from the increasing penetration rate of global e-commerce and the widespread demand from enterprises for cost reduction, efficiency improvement, and digital transformation. Future growth will exhibit three major trends: First, service deepening and intelligence, shifting from basic process execution to intelligent order management integrating data analysis, demand forecasting, and robotic process automation (RPA) to provide decision support; second, further market segmentation, with service providers focusing more on specific industries or platforms to offer deeply customized solutions; and third, technology-driven service model evolution, with cloud-based order management systems (OMS) as a service becoming mainstream, enabling SMEs to enjoy professional, flexible, and scalable services at a lower cost. Suppliers capable of providing highly flexible, transparent, and integrated services will gain a competitive advantage.
