Packaging Outserts and Inserts are printed materials (paper or film-based) placed inside (inserts) or outside (outserts) product packaging to convey critical information for pharmaceuticals, medical devices, or consumer goods. Inserts (e.g., folded leaflets) typically detail usage instructions, ingredients, side effects, and contraindications, often placed inside blister packs or medicine bottles, while outserts are affixed externally as supplementary information carriers for multi-format or multilingual markets. Both must comply with industry regulations (e.g., FDA 21 CFR Part 201), ensuring readability, durability, and accessibility (e.g., Braille, large-print versions). Modern trends favor digital alternatives (e.g., QR codes linking to e-documents), though paper versions remain legally mandatory. Production involves high-precision printing, die-cutting, and automated insertion equipment to meet high-volume, consistency-driven demands.

United States market for Packaging Outsert and Inserts is estimated to increase from US$ million in 2024 to US$ million by 2031, at a CAGR of % from 2025 through 2031.

China market for Packaging Outsert and Inserts is estimated to increase from US$ million in 2024 to US$ million by 2031, at a CAGR of % from 2025 through 2031.
