A panoramic stitching camera is a camera device that stitches together images from multiple cameras or a single ultra-wide-angle lens (such as a fisheye lens) in real time to generate a seamless panoramic image. Its core lies in using hardware and software technologies to eliminate overlapping views, distortion, and color differences, ultimately presenting a continuous 360? or ultra-wide-angle view. The upstream of the panoramic stitching camera industry includes optical systems, image sensors and electronic components, pan/tilt/turntables, etc.; the midstream consists of panoramic stitching camera manufacturers; and the downstream is mainly used in industries such as security, video conferencing, and transportation.

The panoramic stitching camera market is experiencing rapid growth alongside expanding application scenarios. The core drivers are the strong demand for high-coverage, seamless panoramic monitoring and the comprehensive requirements for real-time performance, stability, and intelligent analysis capabilities. Trends focus on the robustness of seamless multi-lens stitching and distortion correction, low-latency, high-frame-rate real-time transmission, the localization of edge computing and AI analytics, and improved collaborative capabilities for cloud management and remote maintenance. Industry participants include system integrators, original equipment
