Papermaking pulp refers to the fibrous material used as the raw ingredient in the production of paper and paper products. It is the primary component of paper and is responsible for providing the structural integrity, durability, and other physical characteristics of the final paper product. Pulp can be derived from various sources, including wood, recycled paper, and non-wood fibers such as bamboo, sugarcane bagasse, and agricultural residues. The process of obtaining pulp involves breaking down the raw materials into fibers through mechanical or chemical means. This fiber-rich material is then processed and refined to create a pulp slurry, which is the basis for papermaking.

The global Papermaking Pulp market size is projected to grow from US$ million in 2023 to US$ million in 2030; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of % from 2024 to 2030.
