PC backup software, also known as computer backup software, protects all computer files and specified operating systems (Windows, macOS, or Linux) saved on internal or external hard drives. Organizations use PC backup solutions to secure their computer data and operations in case of virus attacks, file corruption, and uninstallations. There are many ways to backup a computer. Users can store the backup content in their computer hard drive disk, USB flash drive, online storage, or even on their private server. Not all options provide security and ease of use. Storing the backup content on-premises is convenient but subject to external risks such as theft or power surge. Online storage is scalable in storage space; however, it requires an internet connection and decent internet speed for download/upload. The best PC backup software should recover exactly what the users want with minimal hassle and risk. Since PC backup software is necessary and easy to use, anyone can use this software to prevent their computer from unwanted changes. More importantly, the software must meet their business requirements. While smaller businesses tend to buy individual backup software, enterprise to midsize companies implement their PC backup solution into their IT backup solutions.
