The global PEEK Cranial Implants market size is predicted to grow from US$ million in 2025 to US$ million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of %from 2026 to 2032.

PEEK cranial implants are medical devices made from polyether ether ketone (PEEK), a high-performance, biocompatible thermoplastic polymer, used to replace or reconstruct parts of the skull. These implants are custom-designed using advanced imaging technologies to precisely fit the patient's cranial defect, offering a durable and lightweight alternative to traditional materials like metal or bone grafts. PEEK's properties, such as its strength, stability, and radiolucency, make it particularly suitable for cranial implants, as it allows for clear imaging follow-ups without interference. PEEK cranial implants are often used in neurosurgery to treat conditions like trauma, tumors, or congenital defects, providing patients with improved aesthetic outcomes and functional recovery.

As a new type of implant material, PEEK has gradually become favored by doctors and patients in recent years because its use in skull repair and fixation is superior to titanium materials in terms of personalized matching, medical imaging compatibility, physical and mechanical properties, and comfort. However, because PEEK skull repair and fixation products are still in the popularization period and are more expensive than titanium material products, the penetration rate in the field of skull repair is still at a low level.

In the future, with the increase in per capita disposable income, changes in people's medical concepts, and the further promotion of PEEK's excellent performance among doctors and patients, the penetration rate of PEEK skull repair and fixation products is expected to enjoy greater room for improvement.
