Pellets for horse bedding are compressed wood or paper pellets used as an alternative to traditional bedding materials such as straw or shavings in horse stalls. These pellets are typically made from recycled wood or paper products and are manufactured to be highly absorbent and low-dust.

The process of creating pellets involves compressing raw materials into small, dense pellets that expand when exposed to moisture. When used as bedding, the pellets absorb moisture such as urine, expanding and forming a soft, absorbent layer that helps keep the stall dry and clean. This can be particularly beneficial for horse owners looking to minimize dust and allergens in the stable environment.

The global Pellets for Horse Bedding market size is projected to grow from US$ 122 million in 2024 to US$ 177 million in 2030; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 6.3% from 2024 to 2030.
