Abstracts

According to this study, the global Peptide CRO Services market size will reach US$ 900 million by 2031.

Peptide CRO services refer to integrated outsourced R&D services provided by professional third-party R&D institutions around peptide drugs or functional peptide products, covering the entire process of peptide sequence design, solid phase synthesis, liquid phase purification, structure identification, modification (such as PEGylation, cyclization), impurity research, formulation development and CMC registration support. With the widespread application of peptide drugs in the fields of tumors, metabolic diseases, vaccine adjuvants, etc., customers' demand for process development and pilot-scale expansion of high-purity, long-acting, and difficult-to-synthesize peptides continues to grow, which has promoted the rapid development of the peptide CRO service market. This type of service has the characteristics of high professional barriers, strong entry barriers, and strict equipment and compliance requirements. It is widely used in global new drug development and generic drug consistency evaluation projects.

United States market for Peptide CRO Services is estimated to increase from US$ million in 2024 to US$ million by 2031, at a CAGR of % from 2025 through 2031.
