A performance bank guarantee is a form of guarantee offered by a lending institution to the borrowers. In addition, bank guarantee means that the lending company guarantees that the obligations of the debtor are as per the requirement of the bank.

Furthermore, if the debtor refuses to pay the debt, it will be compensated by the bank. A bank guarantee allows clients or the debtor to purchase goods, buy new equipment or receive a loan. Banks use two type of guarantees direct and indirect, direct guarantees in international or domestic transactions given directly to the beneficiaries. Moreover, direct guarantees are applied where the protection of the bank does not depend on the nature, validity and enforceability of the key obligation. Indirect guarantees shall most frequently occur in the export sector, in particular where government agencies or public bodies are the recipients of the guarantee.
