Abstracts

The global Pet Goat Milk market size is predicted to grow from US$ 3287 million in 2025 to US$ 5811 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 8.6% from 2026 to 2032.

Pet goat milk refers to goat milk–based nutritional products specifically formulated for companion animals, commonly supplied in liquid, powdered, or freeze-dried formats to support digestion, hydration, and nutritional supplementation. These products are often used for puppies, kittens, senior pets, or animals with digestive sensitivities, leveraging the smaller fat globules and protein profile of goat milk. From a value chain perspective, upstream activities include raw goat milk sourcing, dairy farming, and feed inputs, midstream processes focus on pasteurization, spray drying or freeze drying, formulation, and packaging, while downstream demand is driven by pet food brands, specialty pet stores, veterinary clinics, and online retail channels. In 2025, the average selling price of pet goat milk is approximately US$10.5 per kilogram, with global sales volume reaching around 320 thousand tons. The industry maintains a gross margin of 35%–55%, supported by premium positioning, brand differentiation, and growing consumer focus on pet health and nutrition.

Industry analysis indicates that pet goat milk is transitioning from a niche supplement to a mainstream functional nutrition product within the premium pet food segment. Growth is driven by digestive health claims, clean-label positioning, and strong acceptance in online and specialty pet retail channels.
