Abstracts

The global Pet Hospice Services market size is predicted to grow from US$ 967 million in 2025 to US$ 2251 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 13.1% from 2026 to 2032.

Pet hospice services are designed to provide physical care, psychological comfort and owner support for elderly, seriously ill or dying pets, helping them spend their final days in comfort and dignity.

Pet hospice service is a service that focuses on providing comfortable care for elderly or terminally ill pets, aiming to alleviate their pain and improve their quality of life until natural death or euthanasia. In recent years, with the rapid development of the pet economy and the increasing aging of pets, the industry has shown a significant growth trend worldwide, but it also faces many challenges.

Veterinarians or caregivers provide home services, including pain management, nutritional support, psychological comfort, etc., which are suitable for pet owners who do not want to go to the hospital frequently.

End-of-life services include euthanasia decision support, body processing (such as cremation, funeral), etc., and some are combined with the pet funeral industry.

At present, there is a lack of unified industry standards worldwide, and some institutions have incomplete qualifications and irregular services. Some service providers have hidden charges, such as additional care fees, transportation fees, etc., which affect consumer trust.

There is a shortage of professional talents. Elderly pet care requires special skills, but the relevant training system has not yet been perfected. Some pet owners have limited knowledge of hospice care and still prefer traditional treatment rather than palliative care.
