The global Pet Sitting and Feeding Services market size is predicted to grow from US$ 2271 million in 2025 to US$ 3956 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 8.3% from 2026 to 2032.

Pet sitting and feeding services refer to a series of temporary care services provided by professional individuals or organizations when pet owners are temporarily unable to care for their pets themselves due to work, business trips, travel, hospitalization, or other reasons. These services are centered on ensuring the pets' basic survival needs, health and safety, and emotional companionship.

The pet sitting and feeding service market has experienced rapid and sustained growth in recent years, primarily driven by the increasing global pet population, the trend of pets becoming family members, and changes in urban lifestyles. More and more pet owners view their pets as long-term companions, leading to a significant increase in demand for professional pet care, boarding, dog walking, and companionship services during business trips, travel, overtime work, and daily work hours. The expansion of single individuals, dual-income families, and young pet owners has also fueled the growth in demand for frequent daycare and in-home pet care. Simultaneously, consumers are placing increasing emphasis on their pets' quality of life, mental health, and social activities, resulting in the rapid development of professional pet daycare centers, pet hotels, and customized companionship services. The widespread adoption of mobile internet and the platform economy has further lowered the barriers to service matching; app booking, real-time video feedback, intelligent location services, and online rating systems have enhanced consumer trust, driving the rapid expansion of platform-based pet care services. The growing demand for senior pet care, special pet care, and high-end customized services is also propelling the industry towards specialization, digitalization, and premiumization.
