Pickleball balls are plastic balls with holes that are used to play pickleball, a racket or paddle sport that combines elements of tennis, badminton, and table tennis. Pickleball balls are typically made of hard plastic and have a diameter of about 2.9 inches (7.4 cm). They are designed to have less bounce and more wind resistance than tennis balls. There are different types of pickleball balls for indoor and outdoor use, as well as for different skill levels and playing styles

The industry trend of pickleball balls is influenced by the increasing popularity and demand for pickleball as a sport, as well as by the innovation and competition among the manufacturers. Some of the key trends in pickleball balls are:

More variety and customization: As pickleball players have different preferences and needs, manufacturers are offering more options and features for their pickleball balls, such as different colors, sizes, weights, materials, textures, hardness, bounce, durability, speed, spin, etc. For example, some players may prefer softer balls that are easier to control, while others may prefer harder balls that are faster and more responsive.

More quality and consistency: As pickleball becomes more competitive and professionalized, players expect higher quality and consistency from their pickleball balls. Manufacturers are improving their production processes and testing methods to ensure that their pickleball balls meet the standards and specifications set by the USAPA or other governing bodies. For example, some manufacturers use injection molding or rotational molding to create seamless or one-piece balls that have less variation and deformation.

More sustainability and eco-friendliness: As environmental awareness and social responsibility increase among consumers, manufacturers are also looking for ways to make their pickleball balls more sustainable and eco-friendly.
