Pop-up truck campers have a roof that raises and lowers the upper third of the truck camper. When a pop-up roof is raised, the camper is said to be in the camping position. A pop-up truck camper gets its name from the “pop-up” action of its roof. Similar to pop-up trailers, these campers travel in a compact, collapsed state. Once parked, the RV owner can raise, or “pop-up”, the roof and ceiling, to create an interior living space with plenty of headroom. All but the tallest of people can comfortably stand upright in a pop-up camper.
