Powder coating tape is a specialized material designed for surface protection and aesthetic enhancement. This tape is primarily used on metal products and mechanical parts to boost their durability and resistance to wear. It comprises a heat-resistant base, such as polyester or polyimide, coated with a powdered material. These components are designed to endure high-temperature heat treatments, melting to create a seamless, protective layer. Featuring notable properties like heat resistance, which ensures the base material remains intact during the coating's melting process, and wear resistance, powder coating tape shields surfaces from damage while providing a smooth, even finish that significantly improves the product's look.
