Abstracts

The global Professional Product Halal Certification Services market size is predicted to grow from US$ 555 million in 2025 to US$ 967 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 8.3% from 2026 to 2032.

Professional product halal certification services refer to professional services in which certification agencies with corresponding qualifications, accreditation or industry credibility review, inspect, evaluate and issue halal certificates in accordance with the requirements of Islamic law and relevant national, regional or international halal standards for products and business activities such as food, beverages, food ingredients, cosmetics, medicines, health products, catering services, slaughtering and processing, packaging materials and logistics warehousing. Its services usually include application acceptance, document review, raw material and supplier verification, production site audit, critical control point inspection, laboratory testing, rectification review, certificate issuance and annual supervision and audit, etc. Different from ordinary quality management system certification, halal certification not only focuses on product safety and production compliance, but also focuses on evaluating the source of raw materials, production equipment, processing aids, cross-contamination prevention and control, storage and transportation conditions and supply chain traceability to ensure that the product and its production process meet the halal requirements of the target market.

The growth of the professional product Halal certification service market is primarily driven by factors such as the expanding global Muslim population, rising demand for Halal food and consumer goods, increased cross-border trade, and stricter regulatory requirements in import markets. Enterprises in sectors including food and beverage, cosmetics, pharmaceuticals, nutritional supplements, and foodservice require locally recognized Halal certification to enter consumer markets in the Middle East, Southeast Asia, and other regions with significant Muslim populations, thereby continuously fueling the demand for professional certification services. Meanwhile, growing consumer emphasis on ingredient transparency, product authenticity, and supply chain traceability is prompting companies to extend Halal management beyond individual product certification to encompass suppliers, production lines, warehousing, and logistics. The gradual refinement of national Halal standards, accreditation systems, and mutual recognition mechanisms is fostering the industry's standardized development; however, disparities in regional standards, inconsistencies in the accreditation scope of certification bodies, and requirements for cross-border certificate conversion continue to drive corporate reliance on professional service providers possessing international networks and multi-market certification capabilities.
