A PTP Packaging Machine, also known as a Press Through Packaging Machine, is a type of equipment primarily used for packaging products in diverse industries. It operates on the principle of thermoforming and heat - sealing. First, a roll of plastic hard sheet (such as PVC or PVDC) is heated to a softened state. Then, with the help of a mold and pressure, the softened plastic is formed into blisters that match the shape of the items to be packed. After that, the items are accurately filled into these blisters. Subsequently, an aluminum foil or other composite film is placed on top, and heat - sealing is carried out at a specific temperature and pressure to create individual, sealed packaging units. This machine is widely applied in the pharmaceutical, food, and electronics industries to ensure product protection, quality preservation, and convenient use for consumers.

United States market for PTP Packaging Machine is estimated to increase from US$ million in 2024 to US$ million by 2031, at a CAGR of % from 2025 through 2031.
