Abstracts

According to this study, the global Ready to Move Homes market size will reach US$ 66110 million by 2031.

Ready to Move Homes are houses built using modular and prefabricated construction techniques, where building components are prefabricated in a factory-controlled environment and then transported to the actual construction site for rapid assembly. Ready to Move Homes are not limited to residential buildings, but may also include commercial building types such as office buildings and warehouses, which offer varying degrees of customization and are leading a revolution in construction, reshaping the way we think about living and building space. This construction method significantly shortens the construction turnaround time, allowing houses to be put into use quickly.
