Abstracts

The global Residential Low Slope Roofing market size is predicted to grow from US$ 4688 million in 2025 to US$ 7113 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 6.3% from 2026 to 2032.

Residential low slope roofing refers to roofing on homes where the pitch (the steepness of the roof) is relatively low. Specifically, a roof is considered low slope when its pitch is below 2:12, meaning it rises less than 2 vertical units (inches or feet) for every 12 horizontal units extended. Unlike steeper - pitched roofs, low slope roofs don't allow water to drain quickly and naturally into gutters. This slow drainage means they are more prone to water ponding (where water accumulates on the roof surface), increasing the risk of leaks and damage if not properly managed.

United States market for Residential Low Slope Roofing is estimated to increase from US$ million in 2025 to US$ million by 2032, at a CAGR of % from 2026 through 2032.
