Retail shelf monitoring systems are intelligent monitoring and data acquisition devices for the retail industry. They are primarily used to monitor the real-time inventory status of goods on shelves, product display, price tags, and customer behavior. Through image recognition, sensors, IoT, and data analytics, they enable shelf status visualization, automatic replenishment reminders, sales data analysis, and operational optimization. These systems typically consist of high-definition cameras, RFID or barcode scanning modules, edge computing processing units, cloud data platforms, and management software. They can continuously monitor and analyze the goods on shelves in supermarkets, convenience stores, pharmacies, and large shopping malls, helping retail businesses improve inventory management efficiency, reduce stockout rates, optimize display layouts, and increase sales conversion rates. With the development of digital retail, unmanned convenience stores, and smart supply chains, retail shelf monitoring systems are upgrading towards AI intelligent analysis, real-time alerts, multi-store linkage, and mobile-based visual management. They have broad application prospects and market opportunities in retail automation, supply chain optimization, and enhanced customer experience.
