Rifle accessories are any parts or components that can be attached to or used with a rifle to enhance its performance, functionality, appearance, or comfort. Some examples of rifle accessories are:

Scopes, sights, and optics: These are devices that help the shooter aim more accurately at the target by magnifying the image, providing a reticle, or projecting a laser dot.

Magazines, clips, and loaders: These are devices that hold and feed ammunition into the rifle chamber, allowing for faster reloading and higher capacity.

Stocks, grips, and bipods: These are parts that affect how the rifle is held and supported by the shooter, improving stability, recoil management, ergonomics, and aesthetics.

Suppressors, flash hiders, and muzzle brakes: These are devices that attach to the muzzle of the rifle and reduce the noise, flash, or recoil produced by the shot.

Slings, cases, and holsters: These are accessories that help the shooter carry, transport, or store the rifle safely and conveniently.
