A cover roof is a type of roof renovation method. Roof renovation methods differ greatly depending on the type of roofing material, and can be broadly classified into the renewal method, in which everything related to the old roof is removed and a completely new roof is installed, and the cover roof method, in which the old roof is left in place and a new roof is installed over it. Unlike the renewal method, the cover roof method does not require the removal and disposal of the original roof, thus reducing renovation costs.

Roof coverings are materials or layers placed on the top of a building to protect it from weather elements like rain, snow, wind, and sunlight. These coverings are critical in ensuring the building remains waterproof, insulated, and durable. The choice of roof covering depends on factors like the climate, the architectural style of the building, budget, and personal preferences.
