Abstracts

The global Salmon Nasal Cartilage Extract market size is predicted to grow from US$ 6.70 million in 2025 to US$ 13.15 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 10.2% from 2026 to 2032.

Salmon nasal cartilage extract is a marine-derived functional bioactive ingredient produced primarily from the nasal cartilage of salmon heads through low-temperature extraction, food-grade mild-acid extraction, enzyme-assisted processing, filtration, membrane separation, concentration, and drying. Proteoglycan is generally the principal bioactive component, while certain products also retain undenatured Type II collagen, Type XI collagen, and other extracellular matrix constituents naturally present in cartilage. Depending on proteoglycan concentration, collagen retention, and purification level, commercial products may be supplied as proteoglycan-enriched extracts, high-purity proteoglycan ingredients, or proteoglycan–undenatured collagen complexes, typically in powder or liquid form. Major applications include dietary supplements, functional foods, beauty-from-within products, cosmetics, and personal care products. The global sales volume of salmon nasal cartilage extract was 4.23 metric tons in 2025, the average selling price was US$1,620/kg, and the industry average gross margin ranged from 45% to 55%. The Salmon Nasal Cartilage Extract value chain begins with salmon heads and nasal cartilage generated as by-products of salmon processing. Midstream production involves separation, cleaning, low-temperature extraction, filtration, purification, concentration, and drying to produce powder or liquid ingredients with different proteoglycan concentrations and purity levels. Downstream applications include dietary supplements, functional foods and beverages, beauty-from-within products, cosmetics, and personal care products.
