The global Scraper Conveyor market size is predicted to grow from US$ 1456 million in 2025 to US$ 1966 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 4.5% from 2026 to 2032.

In 2024, global Scraper Conveyor production reached approximately 18277 units, with an average global market price of around K US$ 78.1 per unit. A scraper conveyor is a continuous conveying equipment that utilizes scrapers attached to a traction component (typically a round-link chain) to push materials along within an enclosed rectangular cross-section trough. During operation, the motor drives the sprocket to cycle the scraper chain. The material loaded at the bottom of the trough is pushed by the scrapers and moves along with the chain until it is discharged at the head end. Its core characteristics include a robust structure, excellent sealing, and the ability to handle horizontal, inclined, and even vertical combined conveying. It is particularly suitable for transporting dusty, granular, small lumpy, and abrasive heavy materials, commonly found in heavy industries such as coal mining, mining, power plants, and grain processing.

The prevailing market view is that the demand for scraper conveyors, as core conveying equipment for heavy-duty and harsh operating conditions, is closely tied to the capital investment intensity in basic industries like coal and mining. Market competition has shifted from pure price competition to a contest of comprehensive capabilities, including providing high efficiency and energy savings (e.g., frequency conversion drives), high reliability (long-life chains and wear-resistant liners), intelligent monitoring (chain tension, fault??), and customized solutions. As global requirements for mine intelligence, safety production, and efficiency improvement continue to rise, suppliers capable of offering large-scale, intelligent, durable equipment and timely after-sales service will maintain a sustained market advantage.
