Seamless Fitness Clothes refer to high-performance sportswear that is formed in one piece using seamless knitting technology (such as weft knitting, warp knitting or 3D knitting). Its core feature is that the loom is controlled by computer programming to directly weave clothing with an ergonomic structure without the need for traditional sewing and splicing, thereby reducing friction, improving fit, and achieving complex functions such as zoned pressure design and breathable mesh layout. The materials are mostly made of highly elastic, moisture-wicking synthetic fibers (such as nylon, spandex) or functional blended fabrics, taking into account both comfort and sports performance.
