The global Ship Maintenance, Repair and Overhaul market size is predicted to grow from US$ 3944 million in 2025 to US$ 6076 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 6.4% from 2026 to 2032.

Ship maintenance, repair, and overhaul (MRO) refers to a comprehensive range of technical services encompassing routine maintenance, troubleshooting, system upgrades, and complete overhauls to ensure continued seaworthiness, safe operation, and compliance with international conventions. Its scope ranges from daily preventative maintenance to dry-docking structural repairs, and even large-scale conversion projects involving complete overhauls of propulsion systems, electrical networks, or living quarters. This service is the cornerstone of shipping safety and efficiency, highly dependent on specialized shipyards, skilled workers, a global supply chain, and stringent inspection standards, spanning the entire lifecycle of a vessel.

Its future is undergoing profound changes driven by environmental regulations, technological innovation, and fleet renewal. The core trend is a dual-track transformation towards green and digitalization: on the one hand, to meet the International Maritime Organization's emission reduction requirements, service focus is shifting towards ship energy efficiency retrofitting, ballast water treatment system installation, alternative fuel propulsion system retrofitting, and the application of environmentally friendly coatings; on the other hand, digital tools will improve maintenance efficiency, accuracy, and transparency. With the expansion of the global fleet and the aging of ships, the demand for MRO will continue to grow, upgrading towards high-tech, high-value-added green solutions and full lifecycle asset management services.
