Silicone Rubber Pad is a synthetic elastomer manufactured from a blend of silicon, carbon, hydrogen and oxygen. The material provides excellent flexibility across a broad temperature range (-60°C up to +200°C), offers high release properties and performs exceptionally well when exposed to ozone, weathering and ultraviolet light. It has a good compression set, is highly resistant to moisture and is an excellent electrical insulator. The elastomer is also biocompatible, but is not suitable for use with acids, ketones or petrochemicals and offers poor resistance to abrasion and tear.
