The global Simultaneous Interpretation Service Software market size is predicted to grow from US$ million in 2025 to US$ million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of %from 2026 to 2032.

Simultaneous interpretation service software is an application that utilizes speech recognition technology and machine translation algorithms to achieve real-time speech-to-text or speech-to-speech translation. This software can capture the speaker's voice as they speak, recognize the content of the speech, translate it into the target language, and output the translation results in voice, enabling the audience to immediately understand the speaker's intentions. Such software typically supports real-time translation between dozens of languages and is suitable for a variety of online, offline, and hybrid communication scenarios.

Simultaneous interpretation, due to its advantage of not occupying meeting time, has developed into a commonly used mode in conference interpretation and is widely applied in various international occasions. Major service providers adopt various ways to improve translation quality. For example, 'Simultaneous Interpretation King' has built-in industry terminology for multiple fields; Interprefy connects global interpreters through an online platform to provide simultaneous interpretation services for clients; KUDO possesses both AI translation and human translation capabilities, which can seamlessly integrate with multiple meeting platforms, and also provide functions such as meeting management and voting; Voice Box can achieve noise cancellation, content editing, cross-language style transfer, and other functions; Boostlingo has also developed auxiliary functions for sign language.
