Abstracts

The global Single Malt Scotch market size is predicted to grow from US$ million in 2025 to US$ million in 2031; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of %from 2025 to 2031.

The impact of the latest U.S. tariff measures and the corresponding policy responses from countries worldwide on market competitiveness, regional economic performance, and supply chain configurations will be comprehensively evaluated in this report.

Single malt Scotch is a type of whisky that is exclusively produced in Scotland. It is made from malted barley, water, and yeast, and is distilled at a single distillery. 'Single malt' refers to the use of malted barley as the only grain ingredient, and 'single' indicates that the whisky comes from a single distillery. These whiskies are known for their complex flavors and are typically aged in oak barrels for at least three years, although many are aged for much longer.

There has been a rise in the establishment of craft and small batch distilleries specializing in the production of artisanal and limited-edition single malt Scotch, offering unique flavor profiles, innovative cask finishes, and bespoke whisky experiences, catering to the growing demand for premium and handcrafted spirits with distinct regional characteristics and specialty aging techniques.
