The global Single Mechanical Seal market size is predicted to grow from US$ million in 2025 to US$ million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of % from 2026 to 2032.

A single mechanical seal consists of a stationary seal face and a rotating seal face, typically made from one hard material and one softer material. It works by maintaining a tight fit between the two surfaces to prevent leakage of fluids. Compared to gland packing seals, single mechanical seals offer significant cost and energy savings. They are widely used in various industrial applications, particularly for reducing energy consumption and extending the service life of equipment.
