The global Single Sided Coated Paper market size is predicted to grow from US$ million in 2025 to US$ million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of %from 2026 to 2032.

Single-sided coated paper refers to a type of paper that has a coating applied to only one side. The coating is typically made of a mixture of chemicals, such as clay, calcium carbonate, or latex, which are applied to the surface of the paper to improve its properties. The coating enhances the paper's smoothness, brightness, and printability, making it ideal for high-quality printing and graphics. The uncoated side of the paper retains its original texture and porosity, providing a contrasting surface that is suitable for applications like writing and drawing. Single-sided coated paper finds usage in various sectors, including advertising, packaging, and publishing.

The industry trend for single-sided coated paper is characterized by a growing demand for high-quality, visually appealing printing materials with sustainable attributes. As the need for attractive packaging, promotional materials, and publications increases, there is a corresponding demand for single-sided coated paper that offers superior printing quality and vibrant colors. However, the industry trend is also shifting towards greater environmental consciousness. Manufacturers are focusing on developing eco-friendly coating materials and adopting sustainable practices to minimize the environmental impact of their products. This trend aligns with the movement towards responsible sourcing, recyclable packaging, and reducing carbon footprints. As sustainability becomes a priority, the market for single-sided coated paper is expected to adapt and grow in response to these changing industry dynamics.
