The global Skullcap (Scutellaria Lateriflora) Liquid Extract market size is predicted to grow from US$ 62.61 million in 2025 to US$ 88.91 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 5.2% from 2026 to 2032.

The skullcap (scutellaria lateriflora) liquid extract is a standardized liquid formulation obtained by solvent extraction and concentration of the above-ground parts of the plant Scutellaria lateriflora. Its core function is as a natural relaxant and sedative component for the nervous system. The main effect is to provide active substances such as flavonoids and phenylethanol glycosides, which regulate pathways such as γ -aminobutyric acid receptors, alleviating anxiety, tension, insomnia, and neurotic headaches. It addresses the problems of traditional synthetic sedative drugs being addictive, having significant side effects, and the imprecision and slow onset of efficacy of common herbal preparations. The upstream supply chain mainly consists of organic or regulated planting bases in North America, sustainable wild harvesting merchants, and chemical enterprises providing extraction solvents and standardized production equipment; the downstream supply chain includes dietary supplement branders, functional food and beverage producers, natural drug research and development laboratories, and online and offline retail channels. Ultimately, it serves as raw materials or finished products for consumers with emotional management and sleep improvement needs and in the clinical auxiliary treatment field. The output of skullcap (scutellaria lateriflora) liquid extract is approximately 800 tons in 2025, with an average price of about $80 per kilogram and a gross profit margin of about 25%. The single-line production capacity is 30 tons per year.
