Snails naturally secrete slimy mucus/snail extract (Helix aspersa muller glycoconjugates) to protect themselves from cuts, bacteria, and UV ray. This protective slimy mucus is enriched with beauty enhancers such as hyaluronic acid, glycolic acid, elastin, glycoprotein enzymes, anti-microbial, copper peptides, and various others. In ancient Greece, snail mucus was applied on wounded or burned skin to enhance skin healing.

Currently, snail mucus is used to prepare serums, facial masks, moisturizers, and fading creams, which are mainly used to treat dry skin, wrinkles, stretch marks, acne & rosacea, age spots, burns, scars, razor bumps, and flat warts.
