Abstracts

The global Social Search Engine market size is predicted to grow from US$ 354 million in 2025 to US$ 673 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 9.5% from 2026 to 2032.

Social search engines are software systems that search, monitor, analyze, and gain insights into public social media, community forums, short video platforms, blogs, news comments, Q&A communities, app store reviews, and other user-generated content. These platforms typically utilize technologies such as data collection, cleaning, indexing, deduplication, semantic recognition, natural language processing, sentiment analysis, topic clustering, entity recognition, multilingual translation, image recognition, video frame extraction, propagation path analysis, and visualization reports to transform public discussions scattered across different social and content platforms into searchable, monitorable, alertable, and decision-making data assets. Its core functions include keyword search, brand and competitor monitoring, topic tracking, tag analysis, KOL/influencer identification, crisis early warning, volume and sentiment trend analysis, dissemination chain analysis, consumer insights, marketing campaign effectiveness evaluation, social media sentiment report generation, and cross-language social media monitoring.

The main challenge faced by social search engines is the vast amount of data available on social media platforms. It is difficult to extract relevant and reliable information from social media due to the informal and unstructured nature of user-generated content. Additionally, privacy concerns and the need for user consent pose challenges for social search engines. Users may not be willing to have their personal information and social media interactions indexed and made searchable.
