The substrate solder ball moulder locates the substrate with image processing technology, applies flux by needle transcription or printing, and then fixes the solder ball in the corresponding position of the substrate. After ball implanting, the substrate is inspected with image processing system and the substrate which is not qualified is put into the scrap box and the qualified product goes to the next process - reflow oven. bga substrate ball implanting machine can be divided into subsystems such as substrate loading device, solder ball supply, needle transcription/printing, ball implanting and substrate transfer part.
