Soluble collagen is generally white, transparent, unbranched fibrils and has a quaternary structure. Soluble Collagen refers to the big, natural collagen molecules mostly extracted from fish or bovine skin. The strong point of collagen is being a large molecule with tremendous water binding capacity, i.e. an amazing humectant and moisturizer. It produces a water-rich film on the skin giving the stratum corneum (the uppermost layer of the skin) great hydration, making it nice and smooth and reducing trans-epidermal-water loss.
