Sparkling mead is an alcoholic beverage made from fermented honey, and compared to traditional mead, it also has a sparkling effect, similar to champagne or sparkling wine. Sparkling mead usually has a high sweetness and rich taste, with the unique sweet taste of honey, and light bubbles, making the taste more refreshing. The process of making sparkling mead is similar to making traditional mead. First, mix honey with water and add yeast for fermentation. After the fermentation is completed, bubbles are added through bottle fermentation or carbonation to give the wine a sparkling effect. Sparkling mead can be drunk on its own or used as a base for cocktails. Sparkling mead is different from traditional mead in taste and flavor. It is lighter and more refreshing, making it suitable as a drink for festivals or celebrations. It can also be paired with various delicacies, such as fruits, desserts, etc., to add flavor.
