Special Textile Fabrics are materials that contain integrated elements for controlling or changing a given application. For example, some fabrics may wick moisture to keep the user cool or contain fibers that minimize odor. Functional textiles are textile materials produced with inbuilt functionalities to meet the end-use requirement apart from their basic purpose. Therefore, they have integrated functions of controlling or adjusting based on the intended application. The functional properties are incorporated in the material at different stages of production such as fiber, yarn fabric, or garment stage. Most of the functional materials used are chemical agents with the ability to control different functional properties such as antibacterial, ultraviolet (UV)-protecting, antcrease and fluorescent whitening agents, antimicrobial activity, water repellence, self-cleaning properties, and flame-retardant and UV-protecting properties.
