Abstracts

According to this study, the global Specialist Operating Room Management market size will reach US$ 3613 million by 2031.

Specialist operating room management refers to a professional management model that systematically plans and regulates the resources, processes, quality, and safety of operating rooms according to the specific needs of specialized surgeries (such as orthopedics, cardiovascular, neurosurgery, etc.). Its core components include: configuring specialized equipment (such as orthopedic C-arms, neuro-navigation systems) and instruments based on the characteristics of specialist surgeries; formulating surgical procedures that comply with specialist norms (such as aseptic operation hierarchies, infection prevention standards); providing specialized skill training and division of labor optimization for medical teams; and implementing surgical scheduling, material tracking, and quality monitoring through information systems. This management model emphasizes the personalized needs of specialist surgeries, aiming to improve surgical efficiency and reduce the risk of complications, suitable for the operational scenarios of specialized surgical centers in tertiary hospitals or specialized hospitals.
