Specialty malts are those malts that by definition provide something different or “special” to wort and beer. While base malts have enough diastatic power to convert their own starch and usually that of some amount of starch from un-malted grain, called adjuncts, specialty malts have little diastatic power, but provide flavor, color, or 'body' (viscosity) to the finished product.

Specialty Malt can be categorized into caramelized malts and non-caramelized, or roasted, malts. The most popular specialty malts are crystal or caramel malts. Maltsters create crystal malts by roasting still-moist barley before drying it. Dark malts are also quite popular. As the name would suggest, these malts add deep brown, or even black colour to your beer. They can also add smokiness, rustiness, sweetness, and even coffee-like flavours to your beer. Given their potency (to both change the colour and the flavour of the beer), they are used in small quantities. A little really goes a long way.

The major players in global Speciality Malt market include Cargill, Weyermann Specialty Malts, Malteurop Groupe S.A., etc. The top 3 players occupy about 35% shares of the global market. North America and Europe are main markets, they occupy about 80% of the global market. Roasted Malt is the main type, with a share about 65%. Ales is the main application, which holds a share about 75%.
