A water tank is a container used to store water. Water tanks are used to provide water storage for many applications, including drinking water, irrigated agriculture, fire fighting, agriculture, plant and livestock, chemical manufacturing, food preparation and many other USES. The tank parameters include the overall design of the tank as well as the construction materials, lining selection. The stainless steel tank is made of double insulation filler to keep the water warm even in winter and cool in summer. In general, most stainless steel water tank manufacturers will provide two grades of products to meet the requirements of class 304 and class 316 inner walls. On the other hand, the outer wall is mainly made of SS 304 class. The stainless steel storage tank is made of 304 stainless steel material which is strong and sanitary. Stainless steel is an ideal material for making water storage tanks. Because of its corrosion-resistant material, it can withstand the worst weather in dry and rainy areas.
