A steel-based floor panel, also known as a steel floor deck or steel floor plate, is a structural component used in building construction to form a solid floor surface. It is typically made of galvanized or coated steel and is designed to provide strength, durability, and stability to the floor system.

Steel floor panels are predominantly made from steel, which offers excellent structural properties such as high strength, stiffness, and load-bearing capacity. The steel used in floor panels is often galvanized or coated to enhance its corrosion resistance and protect it from environmental elements.

Steel-based floor panels offer several advantages in construction, including high strength-to-weight ratio, ease of installation, durability, and compatibility with different construction methods. They provide a stable and reliable platform for walking, supporting loads, and facilitating the installation of other building systems.
