Stern tube sealing products are crucial sealing components in the ship propulsion system. They are mainly used to seal the stern tube part where the stern shaft passes through the hull, ensuring that seawater does not penetrate into the ship, while preventing lubricating oil from leaking out, maintaining the water tightness of the hull and environmental safety. This type of product is usually installed at the connection between the stern shaft and the stern tube, and consists of multiple sealing rings, spring assemblies, sleeves and supporting structures. Oil lubrication or water lubrication systems can be selected according to the type of ship and working conditions. High-end products also introduce high-performance materials such as wear-resistant silicon carbide and fluororubber to further improve corrosion resistance and service life.
