The global Stick Curtain Wall market size is predicted to grow from US$ 17370 million in 2025 to US$ 20460 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 2.4% from 2026 to 2032.

A Stick Curtain Wall is a type of glass facade system in which the curtain wall components—vertical mullions, horizontal transoms, and glass panels—are delivered to the construction site as individual pieces (or “sticks”) and assembled directly on-site. This method contrasts with the unitized curtain wall, where modules are pre-assembled in the factory.

In 2024, global Stick Curtain Wall sales volume reached approximately 114.55 million sqm, with an average global market price of around 151.7 US$ per sqm.

One of the primary drivers of the stick curtain wall market is its lower initial cost compared to unitized systems. Because the fabrication is simpler and installation involves standard construction labor, stick curtain walls are highly economical for retail stores, showrooms, small offices, and institutional buildings. This makes them particularly attractive in emerging markets where budget constraints are significant.

Stick systems provide greater design adaptability since components are cut, assembled, and installed directly on-site. This allows architects and contractors to handle irregular building shapes, curved facades, and non-standard dimensions with relative ease. The flexibility to adjust in real-time during installation is a major market driver, especially for projects where customization is valued over speed.

As urban areas expand, there is growing demand for mid-rise commercial and residential buildings, particularly in developing economies in Asia-Pacific, the Middle East, and Latin America. Stick curtain walls are ideally suited for these projects due to their cost advantages, design versatility, and compatibility with smaller-scale developments.

Government and institutional projects such as schools, hospitals, transportation hubs, and municipal offices frequently employ stick curtain walls. These projects often prioritize durability and adaptability over rapid construction timelines. Public investment in infrastructure and community buildings is therefore a strong driver of the stick curtain wall market.

Stick curtain walls are widely used in renovation, refurbishment, and retrofit projects, where existing structures require updated facades for modern aesthetics, better insulation, or compliance with new energy efficiency standards. Since stick systems can be installed with greater flexibility and without full prefabrication logistics, they are an attractive choice for upgrading older buildings.
