The global Swan-Ganz Catheter market size is predicted to grow from US$ 54.75 million in 2025 to US$ 76.97 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 5.1% from 2026 to 2032.

Swan-Ganz catheter is a tool for pulmonary artery pressure (PAP) and pulmonary capillary wedge pressure (PCWP) measurements. The total length is 110cm, each 10cm has a scale, the air bag is about 1mm from the top of the catheter, can be filled with 0.8-1ml air or carbon dioxide gas, the diameter of the inflated air bag is about 13mm, the catheter tail is connected with a switch to inflate or deflate the air bag. There is a cavity opening at the top of the catheter for pulmonary artery pressure monitoring. This is a double-cavity cardiac catheter. The three-chamber tube is located about 30cm from the top of the catheter and has another cavity opening for right atrial pressure monitoring. If a thermistor probe is added 4cm from the top, the cardiac output can be measured, and this is a complete four-chamber balloon floating catheter.

In recent years, the Swan-Ganz catheter market has seen a steady growth due to the increasing demand for accurate hemodynamic monitoring in critical care settings. The trend has been driven by advancements in catheter technology, miniaturization, and improved sensor accuracy. Manufacturers are focusing on developing catheters with reduced complication risk, enhanced patient comfort, and easier handling for healthcare professionals. Additionally, the integration of Swan-Ganz catheters with data analytics and bedside monitoring systems is an emerging trend, enabling real-time patient data analysis and personalized treatment strategies. However, the market also faces challenges such as stringent regulatory and the high cost of these sophisticated devices.
