The global TOFD Testing Service market size is predicted to grow from US$ million in 2025 to US$ million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of % from 2026 to 2032.

TOFD testing service is a service that uses the principle of ultrasonic diffraction to detect material defects. This service uses two broadband narrow pulse probes, one for transmission and one for reception, and the probes are arranged symmetrically relative to the center line of the weld. When working, the transmitting probe generates a non-focused longitudinal wave beam that is incident on the workpiece to be inspected at a certain angle. Part of the beam propagates along the near surface and is received by the receiving probe; while the other part of the beam is received by the probe after being reflected by the bottom surface. By measuring the time difference between the diffraction wave signals received by the two receiving probes, information such as the depth and location of the defect can be calculated. Ultrasonic diffraction time difference testing service has the advantages of high detection accuracy, wide range of applications, and intuitive and reliable test results. It is widely used in equipment detection and structural integrity assessment in the fields of petroleum, chemical industry, nuclear power, aerospace, etc., and is of great significance to ensuring the safe operation of equipment and extending its service life.
