Traditional Chinese Medicine (TCM) Services is a medical service system based on the theory and practice of traditional Chinese medicine that provides people with disease prevention and health maintenance. Traditional Chinese medicine believes that the human body is an organic whole. The various components that constitute the human body are inseparable in structure, coordinated and used in function, and affect each other in pathology. At the same time, the human body and the natural environment and social environment are also a unified whole, emphasizing the relationship between people and the external environment, such as the impact of seasonal changes and climate changes on human health.

Syndrome differentiation and treatment is the basic principle of traditional Chinese medicine in understanding and treating diseases. Through a comprehensive analysis of the patient's symptoms and signs, the syndrome of the disease is identified, that is, the pathological summary of the disease at a certain stage in the development process, including the cause, location, nature of the disease, and the relationship between evil and righteousness, and then the corresponding treatment method is determined according to the results of syndrome differentiation. Diagnostic methods include observation, smell, questioning, palpation, etc.; treatment methods include Chinese medicine treatment, acupuncture treatment, massage, cupping, scraping, etc. Preventive health care is health preservation, with "preventive treatment" as the core concept, emphasizing prevention before illness, prevention of changes after illness, and prevention of recurrence after recovery. By adjusting lifestyle, diet, daily life, and emotional regulation, we can strengthen our physical fitness, improve our body's resistance, and prevent the occurrence of diseases. Health preservation methods include following nature, adjusting work and rest time and lifestyle according to seasonal changes; eating in moderation, combining food reasonably, and paying attention to dietary taboos; exercising to maintain health, such as traditional fitness methods such as Tai Chi, Ba Duan Jin, and Wu Qin Xi; regulating emotions, keeping a good mood, and avoiding excessive emotional fluctuations.
