The Unattended Self-Service Payment Solution is a business infrastructure that deeply integrates smart hardware and software systems, aiming to automate the entire transaction process. This solution constructs a complete unmanned transaction environment by integrating smart terminal devices (such as self-service POS machines, smart vending machines, and facial recognition devices), a cloud management platform, and multiple security verification mechanisms. Consumers can independently complete product identification, price calculation, payment, and receipt acquisition, while the system simultaneously performs transaction risk control, inventory management, and data statistical analysis. Its core value lies in significantly reducing labor costs, achieving 24/7 uninterrupted operation, and leveraging consumer data mining to optimize business decisions. It is currently widely used in diverse scenarios such as smart retail, unmanned catering, shared services, and smart mobility, becoming a key technological support for driving the digital upgrade of commerce and building future smart cities.

The global development of unattended self-service payment solutions exhibit significant regional differences. The Asia-Pacific region leads innovation, with China leveraging its mature mobile payment ecosystem to achieve widespread adoption across diverse scenarios such as retail and transportation. North America and Western Europe, driven by labor costs, are focusing on upgrading traditional business self-service and are experiencing steady growth. Emerging markets such as Southeast Asia and Latin America are in their early stages, possessing enormous potential but constrained by
